

Turcos Rout Germans on Aisne—Villa Moves on Mexico City
Body of Murdered Boy Found—Suffragists of State in Session

SCENES AND EVENTS IN THE NEWS OF THE DAY

A PULL AT THE HUBBLE-BUBBLE BETWEEN BATTLES
The Indian troops helping to fight the Germans in France cling to their national customs despite difficulties that arise from their presence in a strange country. The trooper shown is a high-caste man.

PHILADELPHIA SUFFRAGISTS LEAVING TODAY FOR THE STATE CONVENTION AT SCRANTON

The interest of Pennsylvania's workers for votes for women centres today in Lackawanna County, which is entertaining the 46th annual convention. Thirty-three members of the local woman suffrage party and Equal Franchise Society started there today in a special car attached to the Black Diamond Express of the Reading Railway. Sessions will last three days. The Philadelphia delegation will have its headquarters at the Hotel Casey. More than 500 delegates are expected. Scranton women have been making vast preparations for the comfort and entertainment of their guests, among whom will be included some of the most distinguished women in Pennsylvania and other States as well.

CANADIAN TROOPS LINING UP THEIR ARMORED MOTORCARS FOR REVIEW BY KING GEORGE

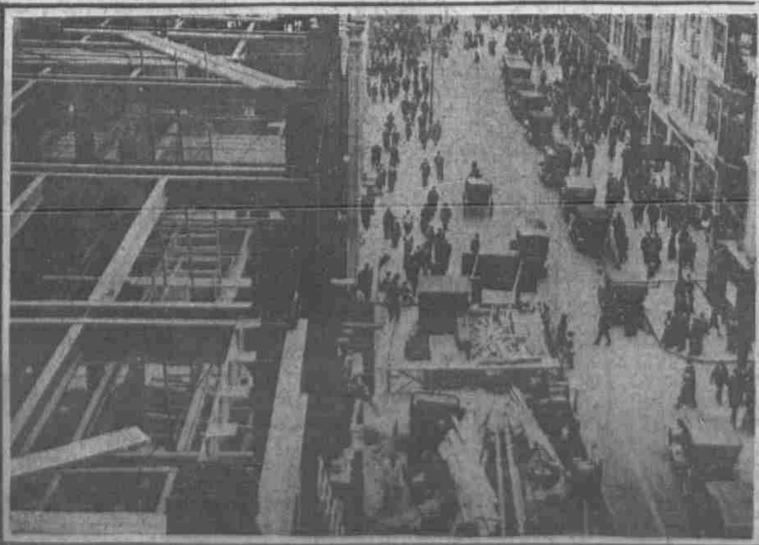

English people were much surprised to learn that the Canadian expeditionary force, shown here on Salisbury field, had brought with them equipment and supplies modern in every respect. They thought their cousins from across the sea were coming from the backwoods where armaments consist mostly of old-fashioned muskets and coonskin caps. One of the surprises that the Canadians brought was this fleet of heavy armored automobiles, furnished complete with rapid-fire guns and searchlights. This battery was the gift of a wealthy Montreal resident, who supplied every article, even to the smallest, for a complete motor battery outfit.

A SURE SIGN OF THE COLD WAVE

That winter is on the threshold is evident from many sights detected in a ramble about the city. These lads are enjoying one of the greatest delights known to boyhood—a fire in an old boiler in a vacant lot.

BUILDING A SKYSCRAPER HIGH ABOVE THE HEART OF THE CITY

Cherry street at Juniper is shown here as the ironworker daily views it from his perch aloft in the growing skeleton of a skyscraper. Men and women to him are so many black spots moving to and fro with apparently no more purpose than so many black ants.

A slip or a mis-step here would hurl the worker to instant death on the ground far below. But practice insures sure-footedness.

A skyscraper builder thinks nothing of being hurled through the air astride a beam whose size contrasts sadly with the seemingly slender chain that supports it. A defect in link or a suddenly tilted beam, of course, would send the rider plunging to an awful death.
